Federico H. Tiberti

02/01/1990 • www.fedetiberti.com
(267)528-5125 • ftiberti@princeton.edu

Education

- Princeton University   Ph.D. in Politics
  2016 – 2022 (expected)

  – Ph.D. Candidate in the Politics Department and M.A. (2018). Fields of concentration: Comparative Politics, Formal and Quantitative Methods, Latin American Politics.

- Universidad Torcuato Di Tella   M.A. in Political Science
  2013 – 2016

  – GPA: 9.5/10 (highest in the class).

- Universidad de San Andrés   B.A. in Political Science
  2008 – 2011

  – GPA: 9.2/10 (second highest in the class).

- Colegio Nacional de Buenos Aires   Bachiller Nacional
  2003 – 2007

  – GPA: 9.04/10

Publications

- Book (with Pablo Ezequiel Balán): La República Pendiente. Argentina y el problema del desarrollo político. Buenos Aires: Editorial El Ateneo. December 2014.

- Book Review: Bertagna, Federica. La inmigración fascista en Argentina. Araucaria. Revista Iberoamericana de Filosofía, Política y Humanidades. December 2010.

Research in Progress

- The Development of a National Bureaucracy and Legislative Behavior in Argentina, 1906-1930.

- Democratization and the Political Origins of Local Bureaucratic Capture: Evidence from Argentina.

- (with Hillel D. Soifer): Education Investments and State Development in Chile.

- (with Bryan J. Schonfeld): Anger, Anxiety and Autarky: The Psychological Determinants of Trade Preferences.

- (with Maria Paula Saffon and Carlos Freytes): The Legacies of Land Inequality on Development: Evidence from Argentina

- (with Giuliana Pardelli): Railroads and the territorial expansion of the state in Argentina

Teaching Experience

- POL 346: Applied Statistical Analysis   Princeton University
  Spring 2020

  – Course evaluations average: 4.6/5
  – Two sections. Instructor: Omar Wasow (Ph.D. in Government, Harvard University). This course introduces students to intermediate and advanced topics in quantitative and computational methodology in social science, such as quasi-experimental designs for causal inference, text analysis, and generalized least squares regression model, and to intermediate-advanced programming in R.

- POL 351: Political Economy of Development   Princeton University
  Spring 2019

  – Course evaluations average: 4.75/5

– Two sections. Instructor: Atul Kohli (Ph.D. in Political Science, University of Wisconsin-Madison). This course explores the political determinants of economic growth, around the question of why some regions of the developing world been more successful at industrialization and poverty alleviation than others, with in-depth analysis of cases in Asia, Africa and Latin America. I was teaching assistant for two sections.

- POL 345: Quantitative Social Science   Princeton University
Fall 2018

    – Best Preceptor in Politics awarded for this class. Course evaluations average: 5/5
    – Two sections. Instructor: Marc Ratkovic (Ph.D. in Political Science, University of Wisconsin-Madison). This course provides an introduction to causal inference, probability theory, and statistical estimation, with applications to social science problems. It also introduces students to the bases of programming in R. I was teaching assistant for two sections.

- Introduction to Political Science   Universidad Torcuato Di Tella
July 2015 – December 2015

    – Two sections. Instructor: Guadalupe Rojo (Ph.D. in Political Science, Duke University). The course offered an introduction to the main research agendas in political science.

- Comparative Politics   Universidad Torcuato Di Tella
March 2015 – June 2015

    – One section. Instructor: Juan J. Negri Malbrán (Ph.D. in Political Science, University of Pittsburgh). The course reviewed recent work in many classic research agendas in comparative politics, as well as the most important epistemic and methodological traditions in the discipline.

- Modern Political Philosophy   Universidad de San Andrés
August 2012 – December 2014

    – Two sections in three semesters. Instructor: Robert Barros (Ph.D. in Political Science, University of Chicago). The course explores the history of political thought from Renaissance until late 19th century.

Conferences

- Argentine Political Analysis Society: 2011, 2015
- Latin American Political Economy Network: 2018, 2021
- Latin American Studies Association: 2019
- American Political Science Association: 2020, 2021

Select Grants, Fellowships and Awards

- Princeton University - Bobst Center for Peace and Justice   2020

    – Dissertation Research grant. $5,000

- Princeton University - Department of Politics   2019

    – Best Preceptor (asistance in instruction) in the Department.

- Princeton University - Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance   2018

    – (with Bryan J. Schonfeld) Research Grant to run an experiment. $1,000

- Princeton University - Program for Latin American Studies   2017

    – Summer Research Grant. $2,500

- Princeton University   2016-2017

    – Charles S. '05 and Margaret D. Fayerweather D. Fayerweather Graduate Fellowship in Politics 2016-2017.

- City of Buenos Aires Legislature   2016

- – (with Pablo E. Balan) Declaration of public interest in the City of Buenos Aires of our book La república pendiente: Argentina y el problema del desarrollo político.

- National Prize: National Academy of Moral and Political Sciences   2014

  - – Winner of the nation-wide essay competition organized by Academia Nacional de Ciencias Morales y Políticas (National Academy of Political Science) and publishing house El Ateneo. Essay co-authored with Pablo E. Balán. Publication and $5,000.

- National Agency for Technological and Scientific Promotion   2014-2017

  - – Doctoral fellowship to work in project PICT 2427/2012 "The Role of Governors in the Formation of Presidential Legislative Coalition: the Argentine Case (2003-2013)".

- Universidad Torcuato Di Tella   2013-2014

  - – Scholarship of a 30% of all tuition costs to pursue a M.A. program in Political Science, due to prior academic merits.

- Universidad de San Andrés   2008-2011

  - – Scholarship of 75% of all tuition costs to pursue a B.A. in Political Science, due to prior academic merits.

Select Academic Experience

- Editorial Assistant   World Politics
  August 2018 –

  - – I suggest possible reviewers for manuscripts submitted to the journal World Politics, ranked #2 in political science journals in 2019 by Journal Impact Factor (Journal Citation Reports).

- Research Assistant   Princeton University
  August 2018 –

  - – Assistant to Prof. Leonard Wantchekon in the design of a project on institutions and educational outcomes in Nigeria and Benin.

Non-Academic and Professional Experience

- Aide   Office of the Chief of Staff, President's Office
  January 2016 – August 2016

- Responsible of Policy Research   City of Buenos Aires Government
  January 2013 – September 2013

- Aide to Diputada Nacional Laura Alonso   National Congress
  March 2012– April 2013

Other Knowledge

- Computing: R (advanced), Stata (intermediate), LaTeX(advanced), HTML (intermediate), Python (intermediate), SQL (intermediate)
- Proficiency in Geographic Information System softwares (GeoDA, ArcGIS, QGIS).

Languages

- Spanish (native), English (full proficiency), French (intermediate), Italian (intermediate), Portuguese (basic).

Institutional Affiliations

- American Political Science Association (since 2016), Latin American Studies Association (since 2016), National Academy of Moral and Political Sciences (since 2014), Argentine Society for Political Analysis (since 2014).